

Special Branch Provides Sinecures in Civil Service for Private Secretaries

SERVICE OF 3 YEARS OPENS WAY TO JOBS

Below is a picture of the "Vancover Sun," a Waco three-place glider, flown by pilots Ronald and Sunday, which arrived in Edmonton Tuesday morning from Calgary en route to Ottawa. The fliers will attempt a dawn-to-dusk flight across the domain shortly.

Act is Opposed as Injurious to Merit System—"Retrospective"

OTTAWA, May 25.—Third reading was given in the House of Commons Monday to a bill amending the Civil Service Act. Based on the recommendations of the committee which recently investigated the administration of the Civil Service Act, the chief feature of the measure provides that all post offices with annual revenues of $10,000 or less shall not be under the jurisdiction of the commission.

OTTAWA, May 25.—An amendment to the Civil Service Bill was moved in the House of Commons Monday afternoon providing that private secretaries who have served a minister or ministers for three years shall be eligible for appointment to a permanent post in the civil service. It makes necessary for a private secretary to serve in that capacity for one year only to be eligible for permanent appointment.

The amendment was formally moved by Hon. C. N. Haney, secretary of finance, at the suggestion of Hon. C. H. Cahan, secretary of state, who is sponsoring the bill. The measure before the house following the Civil Service Committee report would abolish the provision for appointment of private secretaries in the service.

The measure Hon. C. N. Haney, secretary of state, declared that it was in accordance with the recommendations of the committee which investigated the administration of the Civil Service Act. It was a recommendation to reconsider the situation.

INJURIOUS IS CLAIM
E. J. Garland (U. F. A.-Bov.) moved the amendment of private secretaries in the service was injurious to the "merit system."

Before the civil service act was changed so as to make provision for private secretaries, it was the practice of the commission to appoint their secretaries to positions in the civil service, outside the jurisdiction of the Civil Service Commission, just prior to resignation, said Mr. Macdonald King, the commission leader.

PROVIDES FOR SUCCESSOR
In this way, a minister felt no anxiety about his successor, as he provided for his secretary. This method was very likely to return, if the recommendation of the committee was adopted, suggested Mr. King, unless the civil service was so amended as to make it impossible. He favored the three-year amendment.

It would be better to give retiring civil servants an allowance, than to seek entry to the civil service in the regular manner, and to put them in without examination in positions for which they had qualified and rightfully expected, in the opinion of M. W. Campbell (U. F. A.-Bov.).

Alfred Spoken (U. F. A.-Bov.) said that the civil service was not a recognition, but not at the expense of four or five times their number in the civil service, but definite and justified hopes of attaining certain positions.

The amendments were carried by a standing vote of 101 to 10, supported by practically all the members of the opposition, and a large number of Liberals, while the third group voted solidly against.

It was decided to deal with capital estimates for local improvements.

POLICE FIRE LADDIES HAVE QUIET DAY

One Minor Accident and One False Alarm Only Occurrences

Empire Day was a real holiday for the laddies of police and firemen as well as for the general public. Central police headquarters had no report of any trouble and the three sub-stations had nothing to show for their holiday vigilance.

One minor accident in which damage was done, however, was all the traffic could do to show for Tuesday's efforts. The detective department announced conditions for quiet duty, quiet Tuesday than even on a very calm week.

Fire trucks remained in the hall all day except for one trip to answer an alarm. Neither fire nor police departments had any emergency calls or reports.

At five o'clock, however, a fire broke out in a mail box at the corner of 62 street and Jasper and it was burned the ladders in the side.

HOOIGANS BUSY
However, police were not idle all day. Several calls were made for the hooligans.

At 9 p.m. Tuesday, Sammie Hooligan, 10114 17th street, was arrested for the same offense.

THE CROPS

Crop reports for the entire western country are decidedly encouraging. Not for several years has the promise at this season been so generally favorable.

The "dry belt" has been blessed with early showers, that have served both to germinate the seed and stop soil evaporation. In the northern districts across the three provinces the moisture supply has apparently been ample, in places so heavy as to interfere somewhat with plowing.

The cut worm is a serious factor in the calculation that has to be considered. The government experts have been sending out warnings all winter and spring that a visitation worse than that of last year could be looked for, and there are reports already of some damage in southern districts. Their view appears to be that only a wet season can prevent this marauder eating down crops.

With June at hand, and rain already general over the west, there is a fair prospect that the cut worm menace may be drowned out.

A LUCKLESS VENTURE

The D-O-N is home again, a year and a half since it left the home port on a round trip to this continent.

Much of the delay was due to a fire which badly damaged the craft in a Spanish harbor on the way over. But it is ready to start repairs were completed and the giant plane reached this side of the Atlantic. Meantime it has been losing at anchor in one port or another, the east coast.

The owners are likely to think their bad luck started long before the ship caught on fire, started in fact when they gave orders for the building of a ship of that type or size.

Whether it was badly constructed or is simply ahead of its time, the D-O-N cannot have been a profitable investment, or anything less than a ruinously unprofitable one. It is probable the loss in wages, maintenance and overhead which it has been is larger than its original cost.

If it took a year to hunt up enough passengers to justify the enormous expense, the little producer for the establishment of a trans-Atlantic airplane service. Certainly not while the depressed millionaires have to content the cost of their holiday jaunts.

LITTLE CHANCE FOR TRADE

Premier Bennett denied quite vigorously a report that the Dominion was negotiating a trade agreement with Russia for the purpose of getting something of that kind, he said, in progress or contemplation.

There is little to lament in that, for the reason that the opportunities for profitable trade between these two countries are few. Russia produces few export mainly wheat, timber, asbestos, and other commodities which Canada also produces for export.

While Canada also produces manufactured goods of many kinds and ships these abroad, Russia cannot buy them unless allowed to pay for them in raw products which Canadian producers also produce, or could produce, in far greater quantities than they can find markets for.

This may not be the reason Mr. Bennett resents a suggestion that he open trade negotiations with Moscow. Presumably that report is not true. But if it is, it is the economic fact that makes the Russian market of little interest to our business producers. It cannot take payment for manufactured goods in coal or pulpwood or wheat.

THOSE SEA ELEPHANTS

The railway are shipping great numbers of the Harem of Commons recaptured that the Government sent the vessels of the national merchant marine, or lease them, and go out of the ocean shipping business.

This does not apply of course to the coast steamers which the National Railways operate along the Pacific coast, nor to the line established by the railway management from Seattle to Vancouver, British Columbia, and the West Indies. The reference is only to our deep water tramp steamers, which ever since the war have been plodding about the seven seas, usually carrying cargoes that did not pay operating costs plus overhead.

Canada's experience in the merchant marine business has not been any happier than that of Australia. This fleet of wandering carriers has piled up an accumulated deficit that rivals their original cost, and they were built at war time prices.

The vessels are now obsolete, motor ships are coming into competition with them, and the prospect is that they can only go on piling up more deficits.

The Government seems young again, despairing of making the ships earn anything, but wishes, unaided them onto the National Railways, in hope that the railways executive could perform the miracle.

There was an improvement in the financial results until tariffs were raised so high that they were killed. Then hope for the tramp vanished. The one sensible thing to do now is to get rid of them, unless they can be employed in some special service where competition does not drive their modern rivals the advantage.

WHEN FIRES RUN WILD

The provincial Minister of Lands and mines says fires started by settlers in Alberta last year got out of control and burned 20,000,000 board feet of lumber, along with 400,000 cords of wood. The fires swept over 38,000 acres, and it cost $200,000 to extinguish them.

Incidentally, a good deal of lost burned-over land will never be as good as before the fire ate it into and burned the fibre out of the soil. That damage cannot be translated into dollars, but it should be added to the total of the loss sustained by individuals and by the public.

The Minister reminds all concerned that before starting a fire to burn brush a settler is by law required to secure a permit, which is only granted on conditions framed to give security to him, to his neighbors, and to the public property.

The possession of a permit is to guarantee that a fire will not get out of hand and destroy buildings or sweep a forest area out of existence. But the conditions required before issuing the permit make that too likely, and the possession of the permit saves the settler from a penalty should this occur.

For personal reasons, as well as in consideration of the rights of others and the public interests, one wishing to clear land should consult with the law and secure permits before starting brush fires.

The roads are beyond description. Three and a quarter inches of rain fell during the week. The river has risen to a level, and there is a large number of Fraser's logs have gone down stream.

THIRTY YEARS AGO
Owing to the without no train has yet (Friday) reached Edmonton since Saturday night. All kinds of rumors are circulated, but it is difficult to procure reliable information. The arrival of the next train is an uncertainty.

Side Glances - By George Clark

While everyone is agreed that the present situation demands drastic economies in connection with Canadian National Railway—a policy which is being carried out—the public should not be misled by loose and unfair suggestions that every dollar spent on this great organization is an excessive and wasteful expenditure. Parliamentary committees always include a number of novices to whom the intricate railway business as a Greek—but who are seldom different about making off-hand criticisms.

For instance, when Sir Henry Thornton was testifying at Ottawa the other day, he was asked by the chairman of the committee, Mr. Hanson, of the "Yorker," "how he justified the fact that the publicity manager of the C.N.R. system is paid as high a salary as that of any editor-in-chief in Canada. The editor-in-chief must be constantly travelling as well as technicians and other people who require a vast staff of company." require a vast staff of "go-getters," analogous to commercial travellers in ordinary business, but many times the travelling activities of 3,500 employees of whom 712 are officers.

The Passing Show

By Dr. Frank McCarty

This job of writing a daily column has both joys and tribulations. A few days ago I received in the same mail two letters of chiding. Though both were written by Scots—or rather by men with Scottish subjects of Scotch descent—they were alike. One chap was hurt over the story about the dying Scot who was asked by his sleep-deprived wife, when he fell asleep, to bring to her the morning paper. The other was concerned about a reference to the Doukhobors.

One I suspect is a joke—a Scotch joke. I never told a Scot who was really proved over references to the supposed national thrift. All the best jokes on the Scotch I ever heard were told to me by Scotchmen.

I recall being on the bridge at midnight—on the bridge of Longfellow's poem, but on the bridge of the S.S. Prince George. We were dodging the first of the Fraser River sealions. That afternoon the Shamrock had sailed a dead heat off Sandy Hook with the American defender, Myra. Myra and the Shamrock were the third mate—also a Mackenzie, I think—were on the bridge.

The talk was of the close sailing races. Someone told of the race between two tea clippers from China to the Thames. It was won by twenty minutes by the vessel that got the faster tug. Someone told of the race between an American and an English tea clipper from Kowloon to Boston, sailed by the same way and won by the English by a margin of ten minutes in a race round the globe.

There was a moment's lull in the conversation while we were each trying to think up one better. It was interrupted by the man at the wheel. Then he had been merely a voice in the darkness, answering "Aye! Aye!" to the orders for change of course.

In unmistakable Doric he said: "A've seen a closer race than this."

"What I asked him?" I asked in my innocence. "An' once sailed 'w' a Scotch skipper" came back the answer from the darkness.

The truth of the matter is that the Scotch are a witty and a generous people, who relish the jokes about their countrymen.

What would happen if the Irish were always the winners in the races between the Scotch? And the Irish are supposed to be a generous people with an abnormal sense of humor.

The Scotch are also great in statesmanship, in the management of their affairs. They have a new Scotch mouse-trap recently invented that is better than anything of its kind. It returns the chase after the mouse is caught.

But there is no joke about the second letter. More in sorrow than in anger, Mr. J. K. Macdonald, a member of the legal profession, in a letter to the editor of the Bulletin, asks me to take me to time for protesting against the three-year sentences meted out to squads of unhappy Doukhobors in B.C.

As a member of a profession that is strong on logic, he feels a natural pity for my attempts in the sciences and I feel rebuked.

Part of the trouble arises from the difficulties of trying to find a medium of expression. Fully intending by my reference to a "mute Doukhobor woman—built on the lines of Stan. Zhyzka" and "a lot of mute Douks, who need to say how they feel" and "faces that beg for affection," I meant to convey the idea that these folk were not seductive in appearance when young. Apparently I failed.

Macdonald corrects me by saying that from his inspection of photographs of the nude paraders "I can assure Lou Tellegen or anyone else, . . . that the Douks are not so much as they are stretched of the imagination could be said to justify the exhibition from a poetic or artistic standpoint."

I had thought that, without having had Mr. Macdonald's advantage of inspecting photographs of the nude paraders, I had said substantially the same thing. Or perhaps Mr. Macdonald thinks Stan. Zhyzka is a Polish beauty?

On the same day that Mr. Macdonald's letter was received a further list of these simple people were sentenced to the penitentiary, and another 284 children were torn from their parents. Did Mr. Macdonald when he received those photographs of the nude Douks have such pity for his morals as to let the Douks go free, or would he have sent the penitentiary for three years, or tear a simple child from the breast of its mother?

The law authorities have announced their intention to send the entire 6,000 to the penitentiary, if necessary. Does this moral effort to the pure eyes of a handful of B.C. provincial police, sent into their colonies to suppress on them, justify the expenditure of $700,000 of public money at a time like this? Poor in logic as I am, it doesn't seem sensible or economic.

To be entirely honest to Mr. Macdonald, he does have his endorsement of this persecution on other grounds. He says they refuse to send their children to school and burn the schools. With my deficient logic I cannot see how this could be so. I thought one could not sentence people to the penitentiary for a crime of which they were not formally charged, and giving them an opportunity to be heard.

I saw no mention of school burning in the charges against these folk at Nelson.

It may show a pitiful lack of logic and of principle to say that the Douks are not so much as they are stretched of the imagination could be said to justify the exhibition from a poetic or artistic standpoint.

Macdonald suggests it is. It is shockingly unfair and a blot on Canadian justice, to sentence these B.C. Doukhobors to penal servitude, because of the Saskatchewan children, without distinguishing the Douks. They should have been told frankly that they were being made vicious victims for the wrong doing of their Saskatchewan brethren.

Action of Council Ends Long Battle; Substitution Made

TO Print Section Town Act Dealing With Refunding of Relief Monies

The battle over continuing Clause 9 of the city relief form which they will be held responsible by the city for relief monies received by them, ended Monday night on the motion of Ald. J. J. Collins. It was decided to delete this clause and print in red the margin of the relief form the actual section of the Town Act which deals with refunding of relief monies by applicants.

This section of the Town Act, incidentally in the city charter, gave the city the right to collect relief monies from the recipients of same.

Clause 9, which was the subject of the council's endless trouble and which was moved by the board read as follows: "That in accepting relief I know it is a direct liability against any estate that I have or may have in the future."

UNDER PROTEST

This matter came to the attention of council again Monday night when a delegation of one stated that he had signed the form bearing the clause under protest, and in view of his attitude he had been informed by T. F. McKee, manager of the relief department, that he would be cut off the relief list.

Ald. C. L. Gibbs claimed that applicants should not have to sign relief because they were the form under protest, and he moved that the registering of any estate that I have or may have in the future be not held as a reason for refusing these applicants relief. This motion was withdrawn when Ald. Collins explained his motion.

Ald. F. A. Kempster stated that the clause had been placed on the form for the main object of protection.

River Rises, But No Alarm Felt

No need to hire an old master and practice the sharp and flat of "Rubbish, day away from me, day," as a result of the recent spectacular rise in the North Saskatchewan river.

It has gone up five feet in the past 24 hours, according to W. J. Cullen, superintendent of the city power department, which keeps records at the power house down by the river.

Mr. Cunningham cast a little of his mind into the river, saying that there was nothing out of the ordinary in the rise, and that one of those things you can't tell. "A normal rise along at this time of the year," he said.

LOCALS Busy Preparing for Convention Here in June

Liberal Association locals throughout the province are issuing calls for meetings to nominate delegates to attend the provincial Liberal convention which will be held in this city from June 16-18 and it is expected that up to 800 delegates will be in attendance when the convention is called to order.

ESTIMATED COSTS

It was estimated at $140,000, and another plan for a building of the same size, but smarter architecturally, was projected with an estimated cost of $170,000. General opinion amongst the trustees favored the more utilitarian plan, but the question as to its location would be out of the way of general traffic, not in a position of constant pollution.

DIFFICULT FACTORS

"We have two main difficult factors, therefore, for successful and economical orderization, low temperature of the gas and high pressure. In order to use more orderization than can be handled by the existing system, it is necessary to have a very distinct and practical orderization system. It must also be harmless to the public and the orderization system must be able to handle the gas at the consumption level or decrease."
